What is Energy for Education?

Energy for Education is a program, sponsored by pipeline operators, that helps educate parent-teacher groups, school administrators, faculty and area families about the existence of a pipeline near them. By completing a form at energyforeducation.com, our parent-teacher group will earn $5 -- up to $300.

All sponsored schools also compete to earn the most entries for their school. Three High Achiever prizes and the $7,500 Grand Prize will be awarded. December 9, 2016 is the last day to earn entries for your school.

What else can I do?

Invite neighbors, friends and family to participate as well. Each entry brings us closer to the grand prize! You do not have to have a child attending our school to earn entries on behalf of our school.

How can I find information about the pipeline near our school?

There are several ways to get information about the pipeline near our school. First, if you know the pipeline operator, contact the company directly. Second, visit the National Pipeline Mapping System to learn about the transmission pipeline near our school. Finally, read any pipeline information signs, commonly referred to as “markers”, which provide information about the pipeline nearby. Pipeline markers denote the pipeline company, the energy product transported, the emergency phone number and other information.
